

LIFESTYLE

Ethical Homeware Brands You Need to Know

Fill your home with ethical, conscious homewares that will bring both you and the planet joy.

Sustainability begins at home, and while you might already be working on reducing your food waste, mimimising single-use plastic, and dressing more ethically, your home interior choices could be another simple way to incorporate a little greener living - and also some unique interior style.

Accessorising your home with second-hand, antique or upcycled furniture and picking up handmade homewares on your travels are all great ways to add some personal colour and character without harming the planet, with each item carrying a unique story that you can relish telling your admiring guests. But there will of course be times that you might want or need to buy something new, and there are a multitude of ethical homeware stores that offer beautiful interior accessories - from wool throws, to handwoven baskets and everything in between.

If you're decorating or renovating your home and want your interior decor to reflect your values, here are some of our favourite ethical homeware brands to inspire you:

Shleep

Shleep's naturally luxurious Austrailian merino wool bedding is hypo-allergenic, anti-bacterial, breathable and moisture-removing to help you get the best night's sleep. Merino wool bedding has been proven to help you get to sustained deep sleep 25% faster and more effectively than anything else - and as it is also very durable and long-lasting, you can enjoy your new bedding (and the extra sleep that comes with it) for years to come.

@shleep_well

Eco-Age loves: The Shleep System set of pillows, pillow cases, duvets and fitted sheet.